LIGHTS AND SHADOWS OF THE WAR

Correspondence of the Associated Press

(By Associated Press.)

In the twelve months just preceding the curious effects of the war has been to reduce the number of loans made by the poor of the city at the municipal pawn establishment, and to increase the number of redemptions of property already pawned.

The explanation is that most of the loans, in peace time, are made by the women; that most of the women are the wives of men now in the field; and that never in peace time have these women had as large an income as they do now that most of their husbands' earnings come to them to supplement what they themselves can make.

In the twelve months just preceding the war the municipal pawn shop made approximately 240,000 loans on articles ranging from silver-headed canes to babies' shoes. The exact number for the past 12 months has not yet been compiled, but the director of the establishment is authority for the statement that the number probably will run closer to 200,000. Incidentally the money loaned will not, either, reach the figures of the year before.

The usual rate of redemption, in normal, peace times, is astonishingly high as pawn shops go. With a normal of almost a quarter of a million loans a year, it is seldom that more than 20,000 articles have to be auctioned off. The number usually runs between 15,000 and 18,000. This year it will be still smaller because of the increased number of redemptions.

Leipzig's loan establishment is a huge affair, and is conducted along much the same lines as a few institutions in America that make a specialty of encouraging redemptions by advancing little, and by charging a low rate of interest. The city of Leipzig, however, incorporates a new feature by charging 12 per cent a year, and then by returning to the borrower everything above the interest charges that may be procured by auctioning off the pledge when it has not been redeemed.

Women are by far the most frequent customers, and rarely offer anything of great value. A prosperous loan establishment would scoff at the watches and jewelry that find their way to the municipal "pawn shop" and would refuse to accept the clothing, even bedding and household utensils, that are offered. That they are taken by the city's establishment is one of its virtues, for with them many a needy person can get temporary relief that she could not obtain elsewhere.

The haggling, arguing methods of the private loan office are noticeable by their absence in the Yorkplatz establishment. The women enter by a rear door, free from the prying eyes of gossiping neighbors, and tender their bundles to appraisers who briefly announce what will be loaned. That ends the matter. The women accept the decision without demur and silently get their money.

The pledges are for the most part homely articles of wearing apparel, and often are not without their touch of tragedy. The Sunday shoes of the whole family—father's, mother's, and the baby's—hanging together by a single string indicate a degree of distress if not actual poverty that is appealing.

Ill about a week ago, gradually sank despite the efforts of physicians to save his life. In addition to having charge of the Wingfield ranches at Fallon, Mr. Heisey also was manager of the Churchill creamery.
